Felony charges should be taken extremely seriously, as they are punishable with serious penalties including a prison sentence, costly fines, and the death penalty. An accusation, or conviction, of a felony charge will damage a person's good name and may hinder his or her future opportunities. In the state of California, a person who has been convicted of a felony and serves a prison term may have restricted rights in many areas. For example, a person does not have the right to vote while incarcerated or on parole, although they may vote while on probation.

Listed below are just a few crimes that may be considered felonies and carry with them harsh punishments:

- Aggravated assault
- Drug possession
- Drug sales
- Forcible rape
- Grand theft
- Homicide
- Robbery

We will use our knowledge of criminal law and our aggressive defense strategies to defend your felony crime charge. If you have already been found guilty of committing a felony in California, the felony defense lawyers at The Law Offices of Zola Wegman & Associates may still be able to help you. There is a chance that you may be able to receive an alternative sentence, such as alcohol/narcotics rehabilitation, community service, probation, or jail time (instead of a prison term).

If you are accused of violating parole, we will defend your freedom by fighting against your return to prison. To schedule a consultation now with an experienced Felony Lawyer, contact the Law Offices of Zola Wegman & Associates at 310-285-1766
