

Don't be a victim of the government's war on drugs. A drug charge can ruin a person's life. In federal cases, it can involve a long prison sentence because of the mandatory minimum sentences. For example, the mandatory minimum sentence for possession of 5 grams or more of pure methamphetamine with intent to sell carries a 5 year mandatory minimum.

Police and federal agents often want to turn a simple possessor into an informer, further endangering the individuals and their families. Frequently they will charge personal possession of drugs as possession with intent to sell.
